Customer Reviews

Mark Warda has a BA in Political Science from the University of Illinois and has been a collector and dealer of political campaign items for over 40 years.

My principal collecting interests are British and US political collectibles. 19th Century political cartoons, modern satirical items, glass and ceramics in particular. For examples see:[...]Roughly 1 page is devoted to non US items - this book is otherwise dedicated to the US. The page that is there is very superficial. The book provides examples of many types of campaign items (e.g. posters, ceramics and toys), the area covered in most detail is campaign pins. Official, unofficial and anti (anti Bush, Clinton, War .... etc). The books coverage of pins is very comprehensive. To me, pins are the least interesting of campaign items. I was a little disappointed when I first flicked through the book. On reflection I changed my mind. Why five stars?- scope of book is ambitious, it does provide examples through 200 years.- valuations of items are current.- handy reference. All candidates/parties are listed for each election.- illustrations are high quality. There are very few books dedicated to collecting political collectibles. I will find this book of great use.

Great in assisting a high school presentation.

Has lots of interesting information on each Button and has really good collecting Tips on Reproduction buttons and fake ones.

Good Reference Guide

I really enjoyed this book, but I am biased towards it. I noticed that I was mentioned in the acknowledgments and appear with Tim Hagan and his actress wife, Kate Mulgrew on page 121. As always, Mark Warda, out did himself. Keep the books coming. Kurt Hurner
