Nonprofit Sustainability: Making Strategic Decisions For Financial Viability

Synopsis

Praise for NONPROFIT SUSTAINABILITY "This is much more than a financial how-to book. It's a nonprofit's guide to empowerment. It demystifies mission impact and financial viability using The Matrix Map to provide strategic options for any organization. A must-read for every nonprofit CEO, CFO, and board member." 碉 ¬â •Julia A. McClendon, chief executive officer, YWCA Elgin, Illinois "This book should stay within easy reaching distance and end up completely dog-eared because it walks the reader through a practical but sometimes revelatory process of choosing the right mix of programs for mission impact and financial sustainability. Its use is a practice in which every nonprofit should engage its board once a year." $\tilde{A}c\hat{a} \neg \hat{a}$ •Ruth McCambridge, editor in chief, The Nonprofit Quarterly "Up until a few years ago, funding and managing a nonprofit was a bit like undertaking an ocean voyage. Now, it's akin to windsurfing $\tilde{A}\phi \hat{a} - \hat{a}$ you must be nimble, prepared to maximize even the slightest breeze, and open to modifying your course at a moment's notice. Innovative executive directors or bold board members who want their organization to be able to ride the big waves of the new American economy must read this book." $\tilde{A}\phi\hat{a} - \hat{a}$ •Robert L. E. Egger, president, DC Central Kitchen/Campus Kitchens Project/V3 Campaign "Most nonprofits struggle to find a long-term sustainable business model that will enable them to deliver impact on their mission. Thanks to Jeanne Bell, Jan Masaoka, and Steve Zimmerman help is now in sight. This book offers practical, concrete steps you can take to develop your own unique path to sustainability without compromising your mission." â⠬⠕Heather McLeod Grant, consultant, Monitor Institute, and author, Forces for Good: The Six Practices of High-Impact Nonprofits "At last! An urgently needed framework to prepare leaders to meet head-on the persistent twin challenges of impact and sustainability. This is a practical tool based on good business principles that can bring boards and staff members together to lead their organizations to sustainable futures." $\tilde{A}\phi \hat{a} - \hat{a}$ •Nora Silver, adjunct professor and director, Center for Nonprofit and Public Leadership, Haas School of Business, University of California, Berkeley "Together, Jeanne Bell, Jan Masaoka, and Steve Zimmerman equal wisdom, experience, and know-how on sustainability and lots of other things. Buy, read, and learn from this terrific book!" $\tilde{A}\phi \hat{a} - \hat{a} \cdot C$ ara Miller, president and CEO, Nonprofit Finance Fund "Wisdom, experience, and know-how. Nonprofit Sustainability is a must-read for nonprofit leaders and board members. I only wish the book came out years ago. This is a breakthrough resource on many levels. Sustainability is a hot topic today but too often it's discussed in platitudes. Not here. The authors address the nexus between mission impact and viability, and they give you a framework, a road map, and valuable hands-on tools, not to mention a variety of different examples that illustrate the tools in action. They take powerful concepts from the business world and adapt them to the nonprofit sector in ways that reflect the nuances and differences of the sector, based on the authors' deep experience with nonprofits of all shapes and sizes. Each chapter brings new "Aha!" moments. Get this book for your staff and board and go back to the drawing board with a matrix map analysis and a sustainable business model. You'll be glad you did!

rather than a book. Essentially relabeling the Boston Consulting Group star / dog / cash cow diagram and applying it to non-profits if I understood it correctly. Not a bad read, but the point could have been conveyed far more succinctly, and I think I WAY overpaid for the simplified content.

I was privileged to serve 30 years as a nonprofit CEO. Over those years, I've collected my favorite one-liners on nonprofit sustainability:--One of my favorite profs, especially gifted in one-liners (and magic tricks), often chuckled, "We're nonprofit, but we didn't plan it that way."--"Nonprofit is a tax designation, not a management philosophy."--I've listened to thousands of staff members whine: "Yeah, but are we a ministry or a business?" (Their answer is in their question and the way they intone that nasty B-word.) My response: that's the wrong question. The Bible doesn't create the negative dichotomy between business and ministry. The better question is: "Whatever tax code we use to serve others, will we be sustainable and God-honoring over the long-term?"--Jesus taught us in Luke 14:28-30, "Is there anyone here who, planning to build a new house, doesn't first sit down and figure the cost so you'll know if you can complete it? If you only get the foundation laid and then run out of money, you're going to look pretty foolish. Everyone passing by will poke fun at you: 'He started something he couldn't finish." (The Message)So with that introduction, I was delighted to find this resource-rich book, Nonprofit Sustainability: Making Strategic Decisions for Financial Viability. The three co-authors deliver the perfect PowerPoint slide on page 25--and then build their case across all 173 pages. It's part Nonprofit 101 and part Harvard Business School Getting to nonprofit sustainability involves three steps: --The Matrix Map Analysis --Decision Making --The Sustainable Nonprofit Business Model"The Dual Bottom Line" matrix map addresses mission impact and financial sustainability--with four easy-to-remember icons:Stars: High Mission Impact, High ProfitabilityHearts: High Mission Impact, Low ProfitabilityMoney Tree: Low Mission Impact, High ProfitabilityStop Sign: Low Mission Impact, Low ProfitabilityPop Quiz! Assemble your team and draw the Dual Bottom Line Matrix Map on your flipchart or whiteboard--and then plot every program, service and product you provide into one of the four guadrants. Your Results: Stars: If you have an abundance of stars, way to go!Hearts: Here you're leading with your heart--and that may be appropriate--but if you're too heavy here, you'll need more oomph in the Money Tree guadrant.Money Tree: If you have some "cash cows" (to mix metaphors), terrific. Maybe you can make adjustments and increase mission impact. Stop Sign: This is a no-brainer. Fix these programs or stop doing them. As I often prod leaders, delegate your reading. Several people on your staff and your board must read this book--and review it at your next staff or board meeting. It will be on my year-end Top-10 list. Here are a couple of questions you might ask:--Many organizations put inappropriate time and budget into lagging programs and services, rather than using the authors' "invest and grow" strategy for "Stars." Are we investing and growing in our Stars--or trying to resuscitate one or more dead horses?--When is the last time we held up a "Stop Sign" to a program, product or service. If it were up to you, what would we stop doing immediately--and cut our mounting losses? To help, I often pass along this insight:"Dakota tribal wisdom says that when you discover you are riding a dead horse, the best strategy is to dismount."

Tons of great info! I'm starting a non profit and the book is helping me set it up so that financial sustainability and program effectiveness are firmly linked. In my experience with non profits, the biggest problem was the attitude that we should all welcome poverty & self sacrifice because our cause was more important. Nonsense! Now I can see that getting by on a shoestring not only short-changes the effectiveness of vital programs, the constant financial stress causes burnout among the ranks and saps energy that could be better used making a difference. P.S. the Ford Family Foundation offers several titles for free to those starting a non profit.

I'm the executive director of a small educational nonprofit and this book has revolutionized our approach to strategic planning. Every year, at our board retreat, we map out our programs (business lines) based on their mission impact and profitability. This framework provides a foundation for meaningful discussions about the best way to both execute our mission and keep our organization solvent in the long-term. This book should be required reading for all board members and nonprofit leaders.

Great method for organizations to make sense of their offerings and balance the complexity of effectively running nonprofits. Makes the challenges of self-reflection as a group easier to work out priorities in a constructive and healthy manner.

I'm relatively new to a non-profit board and was asked to give a presentation on this concept. I was able to get through the book in a couple of sittings and prepare a few slides that were very helpful to our group. The book has lots of examples about different types of non-profit organizations, so I was able to find examples that were comparable to our charity.

This approach makes sense for non profits to account for how much a program meets mission as well as the financial viability of the program. The visual representation they promote is especially helpful for being able to show the relative cost and value of each section of our your non profit business
